

Mistry exit may not hit Tata stocks; like banks, cement: KotakMF

<https://www.thequint.com/videos/2016/10/25/qwrap-sp-family-feud-continues-60-killed-in-quetta-terror-attack-ratan-tata-cyrus-mistry-group-akhilesh-yadav-shivpal>

Constitutional Crisis in UP? It All Depends on SP Camp's War Plans

The palace intrigue currently going on in Uttar Pradesh is a hallmark of despotic monarchies. A father and son struggling for power, with attendant uncles, cousins, nephews, wives and daughters ranging themselves either with the patriarch or the scion seems like something straight out of the Mahabharata. It isn't even entirely unprecedented in contemporary India.

Lashkar-e-Jhangvi: The Who, Why and What the Hell?

Another terror attack in Pakistan. This time, the terrorists attacked a police training academy in Quetta, killing 60 police cadets and guards and injuring over a hundred. As the world expected, the Islamic State of Iraq and Syria (ISIS) took responsibility for the attack - but Pakistani authorities were not convinced. They have pinned the blame on another organisation - Lashkar-e-Jhangvi (LeJ). At a time when ISIS and the Tehreek-e-Taliban Pakistan (TTP) are the terror groups in vogue, where did the LeJ come from and who are they?

This is Why Ratan Had to Say Tata to Cyrus Mistry

After the fight between the Ambani brothers, news of Cyrus Mistry's removal as the chairman of the Tata group has become the biggest face-off in the corporate world.

Although the official decision was taken by the Tata Sons board, it was Ratan Tata who removed him.

On the nine-member board, Ratan Tata did not cast a vote because in the case of Mistry's ouster, Tata would have become the interim chairman. Six of the other eight members voted against Mistry, while two others abstained, effectively resulting in none of the members opposing his removal.