The death toll from a recent explosion at a fireworks market in Mexico has risen to 36, with dozens more left injured following the incident. Hospital officials in Mexico said on Saturday that the latest fatality was a woman who had burns on 90 percent of her body. They said that, of the 60 people injured in the chain-reaction explosion, several remained in critical condition. The blast occurred at the San Pablito fireworks market in Tultepec, about 32 kilometers north of the capital, on Tuesday afternoon, razing almost all of the market's 300 stalls. The explosions killed at least 26 people on the spot and also inflicted damage on nearby vehicles and buildings.
